Select the storage pool for this datastore to live on. Configure a snapshot schedule if it tickles your fancy. You can also map a management NIC to a portgroup and two data ports to two additional port groups. Always a good idea. In this way, in a software defined storage world, we use EMC VSI for vSphere. Click Next. Give the datastore a name and description. Click Next to get going. Read and accept the End User License Agreement. Stop! When you get to the disk configuration take a second and add a new virtual disk to the vVNX array in vSphere. Replication between arrays (this requires a two simulators) for example. This will generate a license file to allow for full functionality of the storage appliance. Add DNS Servers and click next. Add a time server and click next. You know what that means? Installation instructions can also be downloaded from here, it is also written on how to extend disk space. Click the Find ESX Hosts button. Often we do not have access to the specific vendor hardware. Now you are off and running with a new virtual storage appliance in your lab. Create a new filesystem: 3. Ability to check in practice as it looks professional disk array and the possibility to test several solutions. The installation is a very simple OVA deployment for your vSphere environment. Last week was packed full of announcements since Microsoft Ignite and EMC World were two large trade shows happening simultaneously. Import machine to vSphere (or VMware Workstation / Player) is a standard process: VNX version is 8.1 which is for the moment the newest. We can also download version 7.1.6 (the version that is installed in VNX3300 arrays) with one controller (less demanding). Fortunately, companies such as EMC provide simulators. I skipped this step and will revisit it later if I need it. In the second step, we move one of two controllers (data_movers) for the second, configured by us earlier, interface (/opt/blackbird/tools) via configure nic command: And the last step, restart the storage from the "revvia" command. Name the pool. Obviously this is not a necessary step for proper functioning. In the first step we stop arrays and add its 2GB of RAM (to have a minimum of 6 GB of RAM), without this, secondary controller (data_mover3) will be in operation (message "slot empty"). Storage is very expensive toys and do not appear, just like that, in the household laboratories. An ad that thrilled me was a free virtual storage appliances from EMC. (Pop Quizzes happens sometimes, be ready to answer questions about the EULA) Change the default password. I also enabled deduplication and compression. (Clever don't you think) Select the disc you have previously added. (As they are) Give the NFS Server a name and indicate it to a storage pool created before. Enable DNS or skip this step. Once you have implemented the OVA, open a web browser and go to the IP address of the device. Login with the username and default password. Username: admin , Password: Password123 Once you login, there is a small wizard to start. When you start the machine, access it as root/nasadmin via console: And configure the network by typing "netconfig -d eth0" (e eth1). When the interface configuration is finished, issue the ifup eth0 command (e eth1). Click OK. After configuration, it will create the NFS mounting point and access the specified hosts to automatically add the datastore for you. Switch to virtual PC with top-notch support from Apps4Rent.com. What does he give us? If you do not add a virtual disk to the appliance, you cannot create swimming pools. The effect of integration: Now in storage systems add your virtual VNX array: Integration proceeds without and finally we can create our new datastore for virtual VNX array from the available menu by
